Dear Sir/Madam,

Re: Invitation for Exhibition and Sponsorship to COMPUMAG2011

Since 1976, the International Conference on Computation of Electromagnetic Fields or COMPUMAG has been an exciting and effective forum for researchers in the field of computational electromagnetics all over the world to present their research findings and exchange new ideas. Thanks to the enthusiasm and efforts of those researchers, the computational electromagnetics is playing a more and more important role in the design optimisation of novel electromagnetic devices and systems, and the software for numerical field analysis and electromagnetic testing are becoming booming industries.

The COMPUMAG2011 will be held during 12-15 July 2011 in Sydney, Australia, and the venue will be the Sydney Convention and Exhibition Centre, which is located in the beautiful and exciting Darling Harbour, in the heart of Sydney and the most popular destination for international visitors and locals alike. It is next to the central business district and has many exciting attractions and events every day. More detailed information can be found from www.compumag2011.com.

Since scientific research is closely related to industrial development, the successful and sustainable development of this particular research field will not be possible without the strong support from the relevant industry. This event will be a most appropriate opportunity to strengthen this relationship. On behalf of the organising committee, we cordially invite you to come to Sydney in July 2011 to introduce and demonstrate your products and to find new ideas through various interaction opportunities with our delegates from almost every industrialised countries around the world. To organize a successful conference, we also need your generous support and therefore sincerely request your kind sponsorships to the conference.
